Perfection before production

Model rooms

Before entering production, a model room will be designed to your specifications.

The model room is a crucial project phase where trial project fitments are conducted to ensure all quality and performance standards are met before proceeding to production.

Streamline the approval process

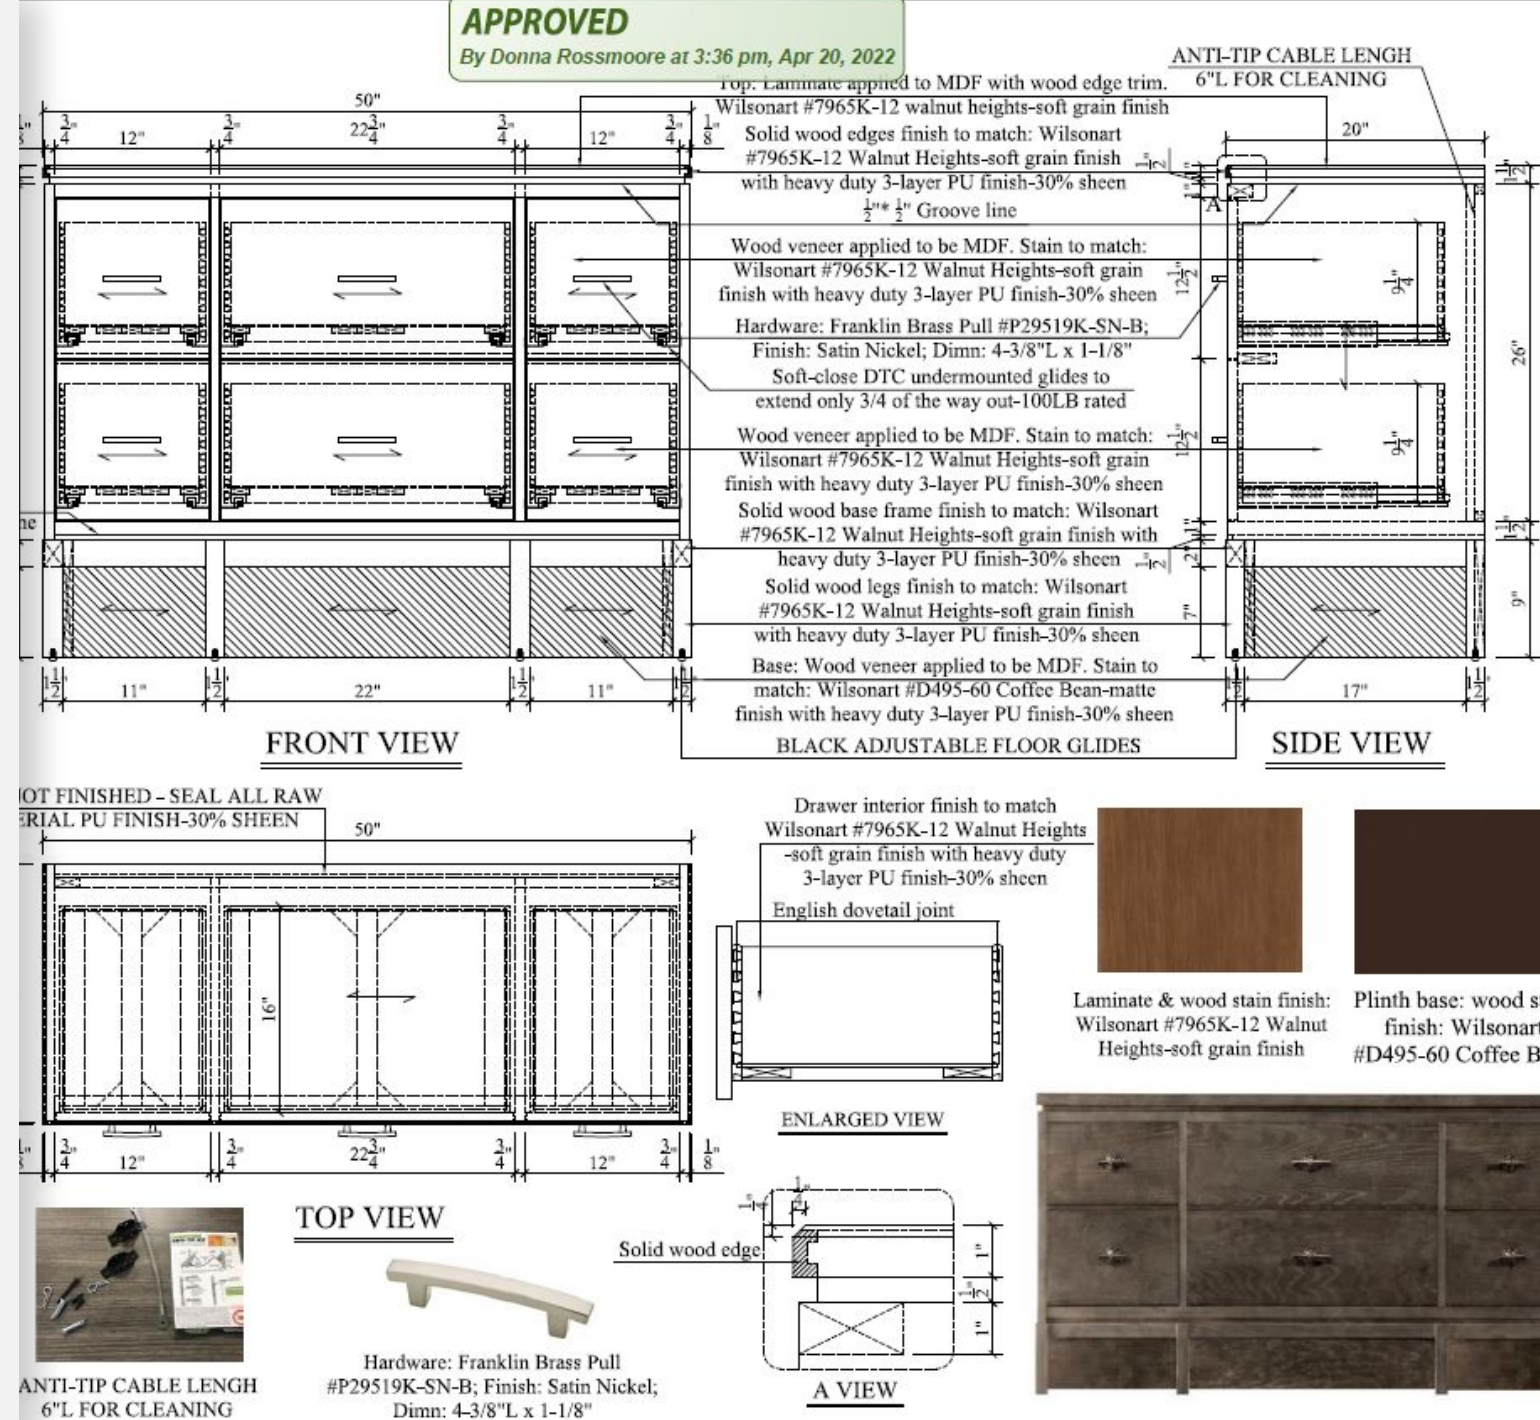

Shop drawings

At Andaaz, every project begins with the creation of detailed shop drawings that serve as a blueprint for bringing your creative visions to life. Our project managers work with you throughout this process, translating concepts into technical plans.

By involving you at each stage, we minimize surprises, streamline approvals, and set the foundation for flawless fabrication and installation.

Production process quality control

Quality control

Quality control is built into every stage of our manufacturing process to ensure consistent results.

We begin with material inspection. Every component is vetted for durability, safety, and sustainability.

Next, we perform precision manufacturing checks, reviewing each detail against shop drawings.

As pieces are assembled, in-process audits confirm structural integrity and craftsmanship.

Before shipment, a final pre-shipment review ensures every product meets high quality standards.
